Purpose

The Annual Asian American Mentorship Mixer originated from the Association for Asian American Graduate Students in 2006. This event, in its present-form as a joint collaboration between multiple organizations, is intended to foster greater connections between graduate and undergraduate students.

This is a starting point for deepening the knowledge, skills, and access that undergraduates have to make more informed decisions about how to navigate graduation, internships, graduate and professional school, and additional resources for success.

Mentorship is a two-way process, where knowledge travels between and has the potential to benefit both mentors and mentees. Rather than designating one person as your mentor, keep in touch with the personal connections you made.
